iPS Cell Technical Workshop

November 24th (Fri)

9.00 am – 5.00 pm

Topics

- Cell Reprogramming
- Maintenance and validation of human iPS cell lines
- Characterization of established iPS cell lines

Main Facilitator
A/Prof. Tomoko Soga

Introduction

Induced pluripotent stem cell (iPSC) technology has dramatically enhanced stem cell research such as disease modeling and drug screening, and clinical application for patient-matched cellular replacement therapies. This workshop will provide several lectures and hand on sessions to cover a key area of importance for techniques and biology underlying the process of cell reprogramming, productions, maintenance and characterization of iPSC ensuring the quality of the stem cell lines produced

Who Should Attend?

- Academic members
- Non-Academic members - Research Assistants, Technical Officers, Master/PhD Students, Young Scientist, Veterinarians

Hands-on Lab Session

- Basic cell culture for human iPSC including media preparation, colony picking and expansion
- Identification of emergent iPS cell colonies and their isolation
- Characterization of established iPS cells via immunostaining and quantitative PCR

Methodology

Hand-on session 65%
Lecture 25%
Open Discussion 10%
