

Master of Biomedical Science Research Opportunities

The roles of schema and script in the recall of event memories

Schema refers to a knowledge structure that is already in our memory system. However, a script is a pre-existing knowledge structure that is only relevant to the event sequences. This project investigates how experimentally generated schema influences the recall of event memories. It also explores the role of life scripts in the construction of personal life experiences.